

DUTIES OF A CLASS REPRESENTATIVE

1. A class representative represents the interests of all members of his or her class in litigation to recover money damages for the class. ✓
2. A class representative has claims that are typical of those of the class, and thus involve common issues of law or of fact. For example, as a class representative, your claims against the defendant(s) are typical of the claims against them, because you all relied on similar representations, because you all signed similar contracts, or because you all suffer the same type of damages from the defendant's conduct. ✓
3. A class representative always considers the interest of the entire class just as he or she would consider his or her own interests. ✓
4. A class representative participates actively in the lawsuit in ways such as by testifying at deposition and trial, answering written interrogatories, producing all requested relevant documents and generally keeping aware of the status and progress of the lawsuit. ✓
5. A class representative recognizes and accepts that any resolution of the lawsuit, by settlement or dismissal, is subject to court approval, and must be designed in the best interest of the class as a whole. ✓
6. A class representative is not required to be particularly sophisticated or knowledgeable with respect to the subject of the lawsuit. However, the class representative should be interested, on a continuous basis, in the progress of the lawsuit, and make every effort to provide his or her lawyers and the court with all relevant facts of which he or she is aware. ✓
7. A class representative volunteers and agrees to represent many other people with similar claims and damages because of the importance that all benefit from the lawsuit equally; because a class lawsuit will save time, money and effort, and thus will benefit all parties and the court; and because the class action is an important tool to assure compliance with the law. ✓

Before a judgment in a class action may bind absent class members, a named plaintiff and the attorneys who seek to represent absent class members must demonstrate to the court's satisfaction, among other things, that:

- (a) the named plaintiff's claims are " typical" of the claims of the absent class members; ✓
- (b) the named plaintiff has no interest in the outcome of the action that is antagonistic to, or in conflict with, the interests of the absent class members; ✓
- (c) the named plaintiff is not subject to unique defenses that could become the focus of the litigation to the detriment of the absent class members; and ✓

- (d) the named plaintiff's attorneys will be able to fairly and adequately represent the interests of the absent class members.

Because the conduct and decisions of a named plaintiff in a class action affect the interests and rights of class members who are not before the court, the named plaintiff owes these absent class members certain fiduciary duties. As a result of these legally imposed duties, a named plaintiff, among other things:

- (a) may not place his or her own interests above those of absent class members; ✓
- (b) may not act in a deceitful or unethical manner toward the court or the absent class members; and ✓
- (c) is required to disclose to the court any fact that reasonably could affect his or her ability to fairly or adequately represent the interests of the absent class members. ✓

The named plaintiff's attorneys in a class action also owe the absent class members fiduciary duties. As a result of these legally imposed duties, the named plaintiff's attorneys, among other things:

- (a) may not give preferential treatment to the interests of the named plaintiff over the interests of the absent class members; ✓
- (b) may not act in a deceitful or unethical manner toward the court or the absent class members; and ✓
- (c) are required to disclose to the court any fact that reasonably could affect the attorneys' ability to fairly or adequately represent the interests of the absent class members. ✓

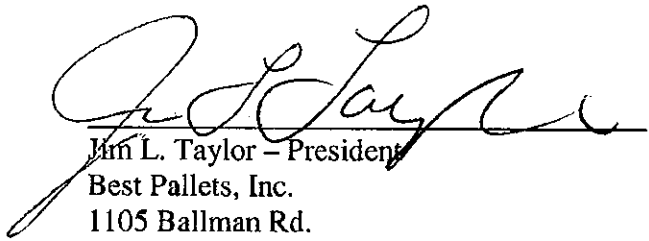

The compensation that may be paid to a named plaintiff in a class action is limited to the following:

- (a) the named plaintiff's pro rata share of the recovery obtained in the lawsuit, calculated on the same basis as the pro rata shares available to all of the absent class members; and ✓
- (b) the reasonable costs and expenses incurred in connection with the lawsuit, as approved by the court. Additionally, in some circumstances, the court presiding over such a lawsuit may award a modest bonus payment to the named plaintiff, in recognition of the effort in obtaining a beneficial result for the absent class members. Such a bonus payment may be awarded only if it is first disclosed to absent class members, and only after the absent class members have an opportunity to object to the bonus award. ✓

Because a named plaintiff acts as a fiduciary* toward absent class members and is required to remain free of any conflict of interest toward them, the named plaintiff may not have any financial interest in the outcome of a class action lawsuit other than those described above.

- * A fiduciary duty is the highest standard of care imposed at either equity or law. A fiduciary is expected to be extremely loyal to the person to whom they owe the duty (the "principal"); they must not put their personal interests before the duty, and must not profit from their position as a fiduciary, unless the principal consents. The fiduciary relationship is highlighted by good faith, loyalty and trust, and the word itself originally comes from the Latin fides, meaning faith, and fiducia.

DATED this ¹²~~11~~th day of December, 2007.

Jim L. Taylor - President
Best Pallets, Inc.
1105 Ballman Rd.
Fort Smith, AR 72901
(479) 782-4233 Telephone
(479) 792-9732 Facsimile

CHERYL E. JACKS
Notary Public - Notary Seal
STATE OF MISSOURI
Platte County
My Commission Expires: Aug 20, 2009
Commission # 05464433

SUBSCRIBED AND SWORN TO BEFORE ME on this the ¹²~~11~~th day of December, 2007, to certify which witness my hand and seal of office.

NOTARY PUBLIC IN AND FOR THE STATE OF MISSOURI
My Commission Expires: August 20, 2009

DUTIES OF A CLASS REPRESENTATIVE

1. A class representative represents the interests of all members of his or her class in litigation to recover money damages for the class.
2. A class representative has claims that are typical of those of the class, and thus involve common issues of law or of fact. For example, as a class representative, your claims against the defendant(s) are typical of the claims against them, because you all relied on similar representations, because you all signed similar contracts, or because you all suffer the same type of damages from the defendant's conduct.
3. A class representative always considers the interest of the entire class just as he or she would consider his or her own interests.
4. A class representative participates actively in the lawsuit in ways such as by testifying at deposition and trial, answering written interrogatories, producing all requested relevant documents and generally keeping aware of the status and progress of the lawsuit.
5. A class representative recognizes and accepts that any resolution of the lawsuit, by settlement or dismissal, is subject to court approval, and must be designed in the best interest of the class as a whole.
6. A class representative is not required to be particularly sophisticated or knowledgeable with respect to the subject of the lawsuit. However, the class representative should be interested, on a continuous basis, in the progress of the lawsuit, and make every effort to provide his or her lawyers and the court with all relevant facts of which he or she is aware.
7. A class representative volunteers and agrees to represent many other people with similar claims and damages because of the importance that all benefit from the lawsuit equally; because a class lawsuit will save time, money and effort, and thus will benefit all parties and the court; and because the class action is an important tool to assure compliance with the law.

Before a judgment in a class action may bind absent class members, a named plaintiff and the attorneys who seek to represent absent class members must demonstrate to the court's satisfaction, among other things, that:

- (a) the named plaintiff's claims are " typical" of the claims of the absent class members;
- (b) the named plaintiff has no interest in the outcome of the action that is antagonistic to, or in conflict with, the interests of the absent class members;
- (c) the named plaintiff is not subject to unique defenses that could become the focus of the litigation to the detriment of the absent class members; and

- (d) the named plaintiff's attorneys will be able to fairly and adequately represent the interests of the absent class members.

Because the conduct and decisions of a named plaintiff in a class action affect the interests and rights of class members who are not before the court, the named plaintiff owes these absent class members certain fiduciary duties. As a result of these legally imposed duties, a named plaintiff, among other things:

- (a) may not place his or her own interests above those of absent class members;
- (b) may not act in a deceitful or unethical manner toward the court or the absent class members; and
- (c) is required to disclose to the court any fact that reasonably could affect his or her ability to fairly or adequately represent the interests of the absent class members.

The named plaintiff's attorneys in a class action also owe the absent class members fiduciary duties. As a result of these legally imposed duties, the named plaintiff's attorneys, among other things:

- (a) may not give preferential treatment to the interests of the named plaintiff over the interests of the absent class members;
- (b) may not act in a deceitful or unethical manner toward the court or the absent class members; and
- (c) are required to disclose to the court any fact that reasonably could affect the attorneys' ability to fairly or adequately represent the interests of the absent class members.

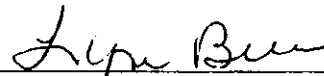

The compensation that may be paid to a named plaintiff in a class action is limited to the following:

- (a) the named plaintiff's pro rata share of the recovery obtained in the lawsuit, calculated on the same basis as the pro rata shares available to all of the absent class members; and
- (b) the reasonable costs and expenses incurred in connection with the lawsuit, as approved by the court. Additionally, in some circumstances, the court presiding over such a lawsuit may award a modest bonus payment to the named plaintiff, in recognition of the effort in obtaining a beneficial result for the absent class members. Such a bonus payment may be awarded only if it is first disclosed to absent class members, and only after the absent class members have an opportunity to object to the bonus award.

Because a named plaintiff acts as a fiduciary* toward absent class members and is required to remain free of any conflict of interest toward them, the named plaintiff may not have any financial interest in the outcome of a class action lawsuit other than those described above.

- * A fiduciary duty is the highest standard of care imposed at either equity or law. A fiduciary is expected to be extremely loyal to the person to whom they owe the duty (the "principal"): they must not put their personal interests before the duty, and must not profit from their position as a fiduciary, unless the principal consents. The fiduciary relationship is highlighted by good faith, loyalty and trust, and the word itself originally comes from the Latin fides, meaning faith, and fiducia.

DATED this 24 day of December, 2007.

Lynn Bell
Pallet Express, Inc.
2821 Assembly Road
Greensboro, NC 27405
(336) 621-2266 Telephone
(800) 220-0987 Toll Free

SUBSCRIBED AND SWORN TO BEFORE ME on this the 24 day of December, 2007, to certify which witness my hand and seal of office.

NOTARY PUBLIC IN AND FOR THE STATE OF NC

My Commission Expires: 10/11/2011

DUTIES OF A CLASS REPRESENTATIVE

1. A class representative represents the interests of all members of his or her class in litigation to recover money damages for the class.
2. A class representative has claims that are typical of those of the class, and thus involve common issues of law or of fact. For example, as a class representative, your claims against the defendant(s) are typical of the claims against them, because you all relied on similar representations, because you all signed similar contracts, or because you all suffer the same type of damages from the defendant's conduct.
3. A class representative always considers the interest of the entire class just as he or she would consider his or her own interests.
4. A class representative participates actively in the lawsuit in ways such as by testifying at deposition and trial, answering written interrogatories, producing all requested relevant documents and generally keeping aware of the status and progress of the lawsuit.
5. A class representative recognizes and accepts that any resolution of the lawsuit, by settlement or dismissal, is subject to court approval, and must be designed in the best interest of the class as a whole.
6. A class representative is not required to be particularly sophisticated or knowledgeable with respect to the subject of the lawsuit. However, the class representative should be interested, on a continuous basis, in the progress of the lawsuit, and make every effort to provide his or her lawyers and the court with all relevant facts of which he or she is aware.
7. A class representative volunteers and agrees to represent many other people with similar claims and damages because of the importance that all benefit from the lawsuit equally; because a class lawsuit will save time, money and effort, and thus will benefit all parties and the court; and because the class action is an important tool to assure compliance with the law.

Before a judgment in a class action may bind absent class members, a named plaintiff and the attorneys who seek to represent absent class members must demonstrate to the court's satisfaction, among other things, that:

- (a) the named plaintiff's claims are " typical" of the claims of the absent class members;
- (b) the named plaintiff has no interest in the outcome of the action that is antagonistic to, or in conflict with, the interests of the absent class members;
- (c) the named plaintiff is not subject to unique defenses that could become the focus of the litigation to the detriment of the absent class members; and

- (d) the named plaintiff's attorneys will be able to fairly and adequately represent the interests of the absent class members.

Because the conduct and decisions of a named plaintiff in a class action affect the interests and rights of class members who are not before the court, the named plaintiff owes these absent class members certain fiduciary duties. As a result of these legally imposed duties, a named plaintiff, among other things:

- (a) may not place his or her own interests above those of absent class members;
- (b) may not act in a deceitful or unethical manner toward the court or the absent class members; and
- (c) is required to disclose to the court any fact that reasonably could affect his or her ability to fairly or adequately represent the interests of the absent class members.

The named plaintiff's attorneys in a class action also owe the absent class members fiduciary duties. As a result of these legally imposed duties, the named plaintiff's attorneys, among other things:

- (a) may not give preferential treatment to the interests of the named plaintiff over the interests of the absent class members;
- (b) may not act in a deceitful or unethical manner toward the court or the absent class members; and
- (c) are required to disclose to the court any fact that reasonably could affect the attorneys' ability to fairly or adequately represent the interests of the absent class members.

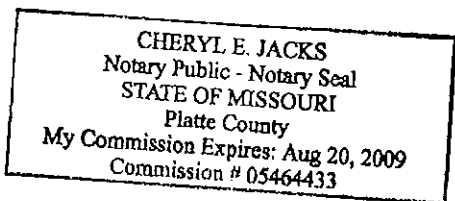

The compensation that may be paid to a named plaintiff in a class action is limited to the following:

- (a) the named plaintiff's pro rata share of the recovery obtained in the lawsuit, calculated on the same basis as the pro rata shares available to all of the absent class members; and
- (b) the reasonable costs and expenses incurred in connection with the lawsuit, as approved by the court. Additionally, in some circumstances, the court presiding over such a lawsuit may award a modest bonus payment to the named plaintiff, in recognition of the effort in obtaining a beneficial result for the absent class members. Such a bonus payment may be awarded only if it is first disclosed to absent class members, and only after the absent class members have an opportunity to object to the bonus award.

Because a named plaintiff acts as a fiduciary* toward absent class members and is required to remain free of any conflict of interest toward them, the named plaintiff may not have any financial interest in the outcome of a class action lawsuit other than those described above.

* A fiduciary duty is the highest standard of care imposed at either equity or law. A fiduciary is expected to be extremely loyal to the person to whom they owe the duty (the "principal"): they must not put their personal interests before the duty, and must not profit from their position as a fiduciary, unless the principal consents. The fiduciary relationship is highlighted by good faith, loyalty and trust, and the word itself originally comes from the Latin fides, meaning faith, and fiducia.

DATED this ¹²~~11~~th day of December, 2007.

William "Bill" Clark
ITNOLAP Pallets
2111 N. Thompson Lane
Murfreesboro, TN 37129
(615) 895-2908 Telephone
(615) 898-1719 Facsimile

SUBSCRIBED AND SWORN TO BEFORE ME on this the ¹²~~11~~th day of December, 2007, to certify which witness my hand and seal of office.

NOTARY PUBLIC IN AND FOR THE STATE OF MISSOURI
My Commission Expires: August 20, 2009

DUTIES OF A CLASS REPRESENTATIVE

1. A class representative represents the interests of all members of his or her class in litigation to recover money damages for the class.
2. A class representative has claims that are typical of those of the class, and thus involve common issues of law or of fact. For example, as a class representative, your claims against the defendant(s) are typical of the claims against them, because you all relied on similar representations, because you all signed similar contracts, or because you all suffer the same type of damages from the defendant's conduct.
3. A class representative always considers the interest of the entire class just as he or she would consider his or her own interests.
4. A class representative participates actively in the lawsuit in ways such as by testifying at deposition and trial, answering written interrogatories, producing all requested relevant documents and generally keeping aware of the status and progress of the lawsuit.
5. A class representative recognizes and accepts that any resolution of the lawsuit, by settlement or dismissal, is subject to court approval, and must be designed in the best interest of the class as a whole.
6. A class representative is not required to be particularly sophisticated or knowledgeable with respect to the subject of the lawsuit. However, the class representative should be interested, on a continuous basis, in the progress of the lawsuit, and make every effort to provide his or her lawyers and the court with all relevant facts of which he or she is aware.
7. A class representative volunteers and agrees to represent many other people with similar claims and damages because of the importance that all benefit from the lawsuit equally; because a class lawsuit will save time, money and effort, and thus will benefit all parties and the court; and because the class action is an important tool to assure compliance with the law.

Before a judgment in a class action may bind absent class members, a named plaintiff and the attorneys who seek to represent absent class members must demonstrate to the court's satisfaction, among other things, that:

- (a) the named plaintiff's claims are " typical" of the claims of the absent class members;
- (b) the named plaintiff has no interest in the outcome of the action that is antagonistic to, or in conflict with, the interests of the absent class members;
- (c) the named plaintiff is not subject to unique defenses that could become the focus of the litigation to the detriment of the absent class members; and

- (d) the named plaintiff's attorneys will be able to fairly and adequately represent the interests of the absent class members.

Because the conduct and decisions of a named plaintiff in a class action affect the interests and rights of class members who are not before the court, the named plaintiff owes these absent class members certain fiduciary duties. As a result of these legally imposed duties, a named plaintiff, among other things:

- (a) may not place his or her own interests above those of absent class members;
- (b) may not act in a deceitful or unethical manner toward the court or the absent class members; and
- (c) is required to disclose to the court any fact that reasonably could affect his or her ability to fairly or adequately represent the interests of the absent class members.

The named plaintiff's attorneys in a class action also owe the absent class members fiduciary duties. As a result of these legally imposed duties, the named plaintiff's attorneys, among other things:

- (a) may not give preferential treatment to the interests of the named plaintiff over the interests of the absent class members;
- (b) may not act in a deceitful or unethical manner toward the court or the absent class members; and
- (c) are required to disclose to the court any fact that reasonably could affect the attorneys' ability to fairly or adequately represent the interests of the absent class members.

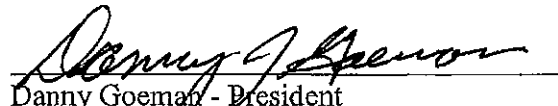

The compensation that may be paid to a named plaintiff in a class action is limited to the following:

- (a) the named plaintiff's pro rata share of the recovery obtained in the lawsuit, calculated on the same basis as the pro rata shares available to all of the absent class members; and
- (b) the reasonable costs and expenses incurred in connection with the lawsuit, as approved by the court. Additionally, in some circumstances, the court presiding over such a lawsuit may award a modest bonus payment to the named plaintiff, in recognition of the effort in obtaining a beneficial result for the absent class members. Such a bonus payment may be awarded only if it is first disclosed to absent class members, and only after the absent class members have an opportunity to object to the bonus award.

Because a named plaintiff acts as a fiduciary* toward absent class members and is required to remain free of any conflict of interest toward them, the named plaintiff may not have any financial interest in the outcome of a class action lawsuit other than those described above.

- * A fiduciary duty is the highest standard of care imposed at either equity or law. A fiduciary is expected to be extremely loyal to the person to whom they owe the duty (the "principal"): they must not put their personal interests before the duty, and must not profit from their position as a fiduciary, unless the principal consents. The fiduciary relationship is highlighted by good faith, loyalty and trust, and the word itself originally comes from the Latin fides, meaning faith, and fiducia.

DATED this 17th day of December, 2007.

Danny Goeman - President
Goeman's Wood Products, Inc.
5840 Hwy. 60 East
P.O. Box 270240
Hartford, WI 53027-0240
(262) 673-6090 Telephone
(262) 673-6459 Facsimile

SUBSCRIBED AND SWORN TO BEFORE ME on this the 17th day of December, 2007, to certify which witness my hand and seal of office.

NOTARY PUBLIC IN AND FOR THE STATE OF ~~TEXAS~~ WISCONSIN
My Commission Expires: May 23, 2010